DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-6, 8-14 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over McDonald (5,156,898) in view of Maude, Sr. (5,013,070).

McDonald discloses a rectangular sheet (10- as seen in figure 4) of foldable material having an upper side and a reverse side, the sheet having a plurality of substantially parallel primary folds (12) forming a series of panels foldably arranged one atop another; one or more secondary folds (14) in the sheet substantially perpendicular to the plurality of substantially parallel primary folds forming sub-panels which are foldably perpendicular to the primary folds; wherein one of the sub-panels forms a front cover (20) of the booklet and one of the sub-panels forms a rear cover (22) of the booklet.

McDonald discloses the claimed invention except for the specific arrangement and/or content of indicia (printed matter) set forth in the claims. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide any desired indicia in the booklet since it would only depend on the intended use of the assembly and the desired information to be displayed. Further, it has been held that when the claimed printed matter is not functionally related to the substrate it will not distinguish the invention from the prior art in terms of patentability. In re Gulack 217 USPQ 401, (CAFC 1983). The fact that the content of the printed matter placed on the substrate may render the device more convenient by providing an individual with a specific type of booklet does not alter the functional relationship. Mere support by the substrate for the printed matter is not the kind of functional relationship necessary for patentability. Thus, there is no novel and unobvious functional relationship between the printed matter and the substrate which is required for patentability. Further, Maude, Sr. discloses a golf score card (10) comprising a rectangular sheet (as seen in figure 1) containing graphic depictions of the holes of a golf course including "the general layout of the golf hole, from tee box to green, with the optional illustration of bunkers, hazards, and other obstacles." (see col. 1, lines 60-68). Maude, Sr. also discloses that "other suitable course information can be provided, such as shown at 22, to assist the player and scorer using the golf score card 10." (see col. 3, lines 10-12). As seen in figure 1, a matrix (12) is provided to keep score on a hole-by-hole basis for several players.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify McDonald's invention to include graphic depictions of a golf course on the foldable sheet, as taught by Maude, Sr., to provide a convenient, portable device that gives a golfer a quick reference of the golf course and enables scoring recordation.

Regarding claims 3 and 11, it would have been obvious to provide information on both the upper and reverse side of the sheet, since it has been held that mere duplication of essential working parts of a device involves only routine skill in the art. St. Regis Paper Co. v. Bemis Co., 193 USPQ 8.

Regarding claims 5 and 13, McDonald, as modified by Maude Sr., discloses that the substrate is markable (see Maude, Sr. col. 1, lines 54-59).

Regarding claims 6 and 14, it would have been advantageous and obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to provide the booklet dimensioned to be insertable within clothing pockets, since such a modification would have involved a mere change in the size of a component. A change in size is generally recognized as being within the level of ordinary skill in the art. In re Rose, 105 USPQ 237 (CCPA 1955). Further, making the booklet pocket-sized enables the golfer to easily carry the booklet along as he/she plays the game.

Regarding claims 8 and 16, the primary folds are substantially evenly spaced (as seen in McDonald, figure 4).

Regarding claims 9-12, see the above rejections to claim 1.

3. Claims 7 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Maude, Sr. in view of McDonald and further in view of Campbell (Des. 378,358).

Maude, Sr., as modified by McDonald, discloses the claimed invention except for a sheet of paper being inserted inside the folded form of the booklet, the insert containing promotional materials and information and instructions on the use of the booklet.

Art Unit: 3722

Campbell discloses a golf score card having a separable advertising panel. Inherently, it would be necessary to retain the panel once it is attached to prevent littering on the golf course. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify McDonald's invention to include providing a promotional insert, as taught by Campbell, to promote different businesses and/or services to golf players.
